

On Now No Won

Through his performance and site-specific installation On Now No Won, Jesus Palomino investigates the way a discreet, ephemeral, somewhat alien element modifies the perception of familiar urban spaces and draws attention to parts of the cityscape that would remain unnoticed otherwise. In between the natural, sculptural, and architectural, the letters On Now No Won, melting on Congress Square, express some entropy (inevitable and steady deterioration of a system or society) that contrasts with the growth, frenzied renovation, and busy pace of the city. It is a subtle interference with the daily surroundings and as such acts as a reminder of other ways of life and environment – in that sense, it is also a reliever of negativity.
